How much annual leave do I have to pay? All full-time employees are entitled to four weeks paid annual leave each year. Part-time employees accrue paid annual leave on a pro-rata (proportional) basis. Essentially, if your employee only works half the hours of a full time employee, they will only receive half the amount of paid annual leave. The Fair Work Ombudsman web site has a handy tool to help you calculate how much leave you need to pay your employees.

The Pastoral Award 2020, the Horticulture Award 2020 and the Cotton Ginning Award 2020 all provide for a 17.5% annual leave loading to be paid to employees when taking annual leave and Horticultural Award 2020 (clause 27.2) and Pastoral Award (clause 25.2). It is important to remember that employees cannot be required to work on a public holiday. You can ask an employee to work on a public holiday, if the request is reasonable, but they may refuse a request to work if they have reasonable grounds. Think about the following things before deciding if it is 'reasonable' to ask your employees to work on a public holiday.

• what are the employee's personal circumstances? Do they have family commitments or children

• are you offering the employee more money or penalty rates for giving up their public holiday?

Public holidays The National Employment Standards provide that all employees are entitled to be absent from work on a public holiday. Permanent employees are entitled to receive payment for the public holiday at their base rate of pay for ordinary hours of work. Part time employees are entitled to public holiday pay if they would normally be rostered for work on that day. Casual employees are entitled to public holiday pay if they were rostered on for work on that day.

Award free Employees and Employers can agree to substitute another day for the public holiday. Awards provide for additional payment to be made if employees work on a public holiday and some awards provide for employers and employees to substitute another day for the public holiday. See
